VOICE OF THE EDITOR

Living in Real Time

How different would your life be if you weren't always worrying about having enough hours in the day? This week, Jeff Davidson, time management and work-life balance authority, shares his thoughts on how you can take control of your life. At least some of his tips are likely to strike a chord with you. My personal favorite: "People, not things, count most in life. Carve out time on your scheduling software or appointment calendar to ensure that you don't shortchange the key people in your life."
