VOICE OF THE EDITOR

Helping Your Clients Get Loans

In addition to the news today, we have an article written by Mary Ellen Biery, a research specialist at Sageworks, who offers advice on how you can work with your clients to help them qualify for business loans. Showing your clients how to follow her three-step plan will endear you to clients and help make their businesses more robust.

ACCOUNTING &amp; AUDITING HEADLINES

→ PCAOB Report Says PwC Failed to Remedy Audit Shortcomings

The PCAOB last week released its quality-control criticisms of audits conducted by PwC contained in the board's March 25, 2009, and August 12, 2010, inspection reports. Under SOX, firms are given twelve months to remediate their quality-control issues before comments are made public.

→ FASB to Review Business Segment Reporting Issues Based on FAF Review

FASB plans to discuss issues raised in FAF's review of Statement No. 131, Disclosures about Segments of an Enterprise and Related Information, with stakeholders and the SEC to determine whether further review of the standard is warranted.

→ Three Tips for Getting a Business Loan: What Your Clients Need to Know

Applying for a business loan can be intimidating and stressful, and it can be confusing to have an application rejected with little explanation. There are steps company executives can take to avoid some of the possible confusion and to develop a more positive experience while applying for a business loan.
