Survey Finds IT Professionals Unhappy with Their Jobs

Robert Half Technology recently conducted a survey of CIOs and IT professionals to get a read on how satisfied IT workers are in their jobs. Quite interesting is that while the majority of CIOs believe their IT employees are happy, 30 percent of IT workers say they're not. In "One-Third of IT Pros Looking for Greener Pastures," you'll learn the reasons why so many of the 7,500+ IT professionals surveyed say they plan to look for a new job. Robert Half also shares five tips for CIOs on how they can retain their best and brightest IT workers.

➔ One-Third of IT Pros Looking for Greener Pastures

A recent survey of CIOs and IT professionals by Robert Half Technology revealed that although a majority of CIOs believe their IT employees are quite happy with their jobs, more than one-third of IT workers reported job dissatisfaction.

➔ How to Use LinkedIn to Grow Your Practice Part 2: Building Your Network

A great LinkedIn profile is good to have, but unless you use LinkedIn to build your network, you'll find yourself back at square one.

➔ Another Video Conferencing App? But Really, This One Is Good

I've been doing quite a bit of consulting with other accounting professionals and QuickBooks ProAdvisors on how to make the transition to an online, or remote, practice. I wanted a way to easily document some of the sessions so that my clients could have a recording.
