VOICE OF THE EDITOR

Audit Regulators Don't Get No Respect

I've met plenty of auditors over the years. That stands to reason since I used to be one. ANYWAY, what I've noticed is that some auditors feel like they're Rodney Dangerfield of the business world.

Perhaps this is why the PCAOB gets so much grief from people when they attempt to propose new regulations or policies. The reasoning being that if you're a regulator of those who don't get no respect, why would you be getting any?

Maybe being jet lagged has warped my sense of auditing reality, so please let me know.

Have a great almost Friday.
